“ Like many here, Brandon and met in high school. He introduced me to some incredible music and remains one of the most talented musicians I have ever had the pleasure of working with. He was hilarious, he could always find a way to make me laugh. We eventually fell out of touch but his impression has always remained with me.

“ I have so many memories of Brandon. We were very close in high school and still checked in every couple years. I always saw him as someone I would eventually start a band with.

He could jump over mailboxes with his bicycle, pulling off tricks with ease. Anything from clearing the stairs off the back of a loading dock to jumping over an eight foot stretch of bushes.

He had a great sense of humor. There wasn't a song he couldn't play on guitar or drums. He always challenged me to keep it real when it came to music. We were close friends when we both lived in the same southside apartment complex.

He made a lasting impression and will be missed very much.

Thank you Jerry. It means so much to me that you wrote this.

Jerry thank you for your kind words. I know that he thought of you as one of his best friends. I think it brought a lot of joy to peoples lives.

“ My first interactions with Brandon were in band class and marching band at Southport High probably 25 years ago. He was different. Probably the best percussionist I've ever met. Was good at pretty much every style of music, and approached it like a soldier. He was just there to grind because he loved the beat. It wasn't for recognition or for anyone else. Also bro had a pet tarantula.

I wasn't super close with him, but he was at my house all the time because he was close with my friend and roommate, Eric. And so I got to know him pretty well, but he was always kind of guarded. Good for a laugh, but we never got deep.

I don't know what his life was like as I grew up and fell away from my friend group. But I do want anyone who loves him who's reading this to know that he was a blessing to know, and that he was so smart and talented, and everyone knew how genuinely great of a guy he was. It's my loss for not keeping in touch with Brandon. I pray his family has some comfort during this difficult time.
