“Dad, 17 years now and every year I have learned more and more just how smart you really were. And all the sacrifices you made for your family and putting the needs of your seven kids ahead of your own. I wish I knew back then what I have come to realize now and could have told you why you were still here. You are still missed and I still have so many many happy memories of being with you. I think my favorite is when I was about seven and I asked if we could get a payday candy bar. We were sitting on the steps at the Home on Spencer. You said maybe on payday. I can only imagine the pressures of providing for your family, but you came through with flying colors.
