“ Diane and I shared a bus and a spot in the violin section at Woodview Jr High. But we were never more than friendly acquaintances until our 20th class reunion. We talked and laughed for hours. We started writing letters. We were both single moms with 2 teenagers. She spent the weekends when she'd come into town to visit family. We shared many interests...gardening, cooking, music, then grandkids and love of family. I can still smell the dill she brought me from her dad's garden. Then there was the weekend she spent making apple butter with her mom. It was so delicious, my daughter said, "They claim they made this??" There are so many stories I could share, but the bottom line is, knowing Diane, and sharing our lives with each other was something that made my life better. Suzy Bridges-Holman
