“ I knew Ed professionally for many years at Kessler hospital. He was soft spoken and a terrific cardiologist. You could always trust his judgment and wisdom. I enjoyed hearing his opinions on politics whether it be local, national or worldwide in the hospital cafeteria over lunch many times. I don't know if anyone could ever step into his shoes. He was a special person and I'm glad I got to know him.

“ I remember Ed when he first came to Hammonton to practice Cardiology. We met in a patient's room, and in his very gentlemanly manner, he introduced himself. I was on call that evening, and as I performed the tests he ordered, my thoughts were of his kindness. Eventually he became my mother's physician. She was so fond of Ed, as we all were.

Hammonton is a small town, and for the most part, one big family. Ed was very active in our independent political party, and was so adamant about government on every level.

I can remember when my husband was a patient in the hospital and Ed came to his bedside to have him sign a petition that was of the utmost importance to him. Over the years, we became "party friends." He and his wife June, invited us to their shore home for a summer gathering. We were several couples who enjoyed each other's company.

After a scrumptious spread of food, Ed asked who would like to accompany him in his boat for a cruise around the island. So several of us boarded, and we saw a side of Ed we had never seen before. He zoomed over the water with great speed and actually it was more like flying than cruising. I held my breath and couldn't believe this quiet, easy man had that urge for excitement and fearless adventure. There are so many stories about our small town doc, and just thinking about them brings a smile to my face. Most importantly he was an advocate of philanthropy, always concerned about human welfare.

So I extend my most sincere condolences to his wife June, and his family. He is at rest now, along with my husband Bob. All of us our left to cherish memories that make sorrow less difficult to bear. May all our loved ones who have gone before us, Rest in Peace !
With Sympathy, Joanna Conn.

ME

I met him when my mother was ill, he was a rotten bastard imwoukd have rather strangled then have the butch touch, he was the typical small town asshole who thought he knew all and fought me moving my mother to university of Pennsylvania. Mhe screwed up the case and wish I could have seen him die. I have nothing but disgust fir hum personally and as a doctor that cheated on us wife.
