“ There were a couple of stories that our Mother loved to tell about Betty and I will share to the best of my abilitie.

When Betty was very young she sat on the back porch and ate an entire jssr of pickles. When she finished the jar she went to Mom and said " Why did you let me eat that entire jar of pickles, you know they will make me sick!"

Another story Mom told was that one of the boys, I think John was eating breakfast when she wanted him to do something. She said "Jesus Christ, sitting there eating bacon"

Betty always helped raise the younger children and she helped me with my home work. My hand writing was very bad so she tried different ways for Me to hold a pencil and found a way that she thought was better so she wrote a letter to the teacher explaining how to help me. The teacher wasn't happy with the suggestion.

Betty would hold me on her lap at Christmas time and let me look through the local news paper to see how many pictures I could find of Santa Clause

When I was in the first grade Betty was in the sixth grade and we caught the school bus five blocks away from our house and Betty had to take me to the bus stop.

One morning I wanted to wear my tie and we couldn't find it. we we're going to miss the bus so mom said just wear dad's tie so off we went with the tie flapping over my shoulder in the wind, my little feet barely touching the ground and sure enough, we miss the bus.

It had just pulled away but off we went full speed. It was about a mile to school and I'm pretty sure that we came close to doing the first four minute mile. The bus had not left the school after unloading when we got there.

I have many more memories, she was always looking out for me and I loved her dearly.
