“ I am thinking about Jim at the time of his service. I was sad to find out another member of our family was gone and found out at the same time that Debbie had passed away. They always seemed so happy and greeted me with a smile and conversation the few times our paths crossed in our adults years. I find comfort in knowing he has reunited with his loving wife. I hope that Chris, Julie, Jamie and Tim will continue to feel the love from their team of guardian angels who are watching over them.

My mom, Phyllis Wilber, used to tell stories about babysitting for Jim. Those were happy memories of her childhood. Jim and mom were cousins. Much later, when I was much younger, I occassionally went to Aunt Pat's on Overlook Court to stay with Tim while she went to the grocery or dry cleaners, etc. So long ago but seems like yesterday. Time goes by so quickly, enjoy the life you are living and love those you care about.

You are all in my heart, thoughts and prayers as you continue on without Jim and Debbie and honor their memories by loving one another. God bless you.

“ I grew up with Jim and there are so many memories:

I used to sleep over at their house on Leslie Ave. We used to watch all the old horror movies that were popular back then (Dracula, Frankenstein, The Werewolf, etc).

We went to vacation bible school at his Lutheran Church in the summer.

Jim loved cars. He raced "slot racer" and had a kit for his cars that included different tires and spare parts to make his cars faster. He like figuring out how to make them faster.

He loved tinkering with his Falcon (can't remember what year it was). He would put glass packs on it, or loosen the header to make it sound really loud.

He always stayed calm. One time we were walking along a ditch and throwing rocks. I picked up a rock and gave it a big heave. Unfortunately Jim was standing right next to me and I hit him right behind his ear. He never fell down or yelled out. A huge bump appeared and he just shook his head and gave it a rub. And asked what I was trying to do. I apologized and we just walked on...

My parents were a little strict and one time I had a problem with my Dad and I ran away (a whole block down the street) to Jim's and his mom Pat's house. The Bock house was always there for me.

I will miss talking with him. I know it has been rough the last couple of years, but I know he is finally at peace and will be looking over his family, that he loved so much, from above.

God Bless you Jim.
