“ I had Mr. Cinchona for one or two math classes. He was a no nonsense kind of teacher. He was brilliant, though. I got 'A's from him but I had to work for them.

Mr. Ciochina was one of the top teachers at Manual H.S. during the 1960's, a period sometimes referred to as Manual's "golden age" for teaching. I had the good fortune to be in his trigonometry class. He was a rigorous taskmaster and had high expectations, but also had a velvet glove. I vividly recall having difficulty with proofs of trigonometric identities. He generously spent several hours with me after school to help me out. Any intimidation that I might have felt was quickly dispelled. We owe so much to the fine teaching we had at Manual.
