“ I love thinking back on the days when strong women fought the battle to win souls to the Lord. Listening to the laughter and the spiritual harmony that danced around the table of fellowship was a foundation for the sisterhood. I heard respect and admiration and trust blended not only with a love for each other, but especially love for the Lord. Through disappointments and tears, women of that generation marched on with the desire to see their families and the church family stand strong in faith and commitment. No one will ever be able to understand what Max and the rest of her crew went through, but the test of time declares that she made a difference because she was willing to work for God. I have thought of her will affection through the years and appreciate the life I saw her live. She will be missed here...but waiting there.
