

Patricia J. Hoefling

January 15, 1951 - July 7, 2010

Patricia ♦Pat♦ (Cannon) Hoefling, 59 (1-15-1951), of Bloomington, IN, died July 7, 2010, following her courageous battle with cancer. She was the Sales & Marketing Director for Indiana University Press-Bloomington. Her love of books led her to her work in publishing. She was a graduate of Indiana University-Indianapolis. She worked for Doubleday, Scholastic, Louisiana State University Press and University of Illinois Press, among others. Originally from Indianapolis, her work led her to homes in Atlanta, New York, Baton Rouge, Champaign, and finally, back to her favorite, Bloomington. Pat loved music, books, decorating, gardening, cooking, hiking and travel. Pat♦s visit to Dingle, Ireland, with her son became a wonderful marking of her journey in life. Pat found sailing, scuba diving and parasailing exhilarating adventures. Pat will be remembered for her zest for life, home, energy, inspiration, determination, courage, and love for her family and friends. A shining star, her light will never grow dim but will continue to illuminate our world with countless memories of someone who was truly a beautiful spirit. She is survived by her son, Brian Hoefling (and Susan); her mother Mildred Coapstick; sisters, Mary Unger (Charles), Martha Dahlstrom (Vern); ♦sisters by choice♦ Lucretia Lamb, Pam Rameriz; brothers, Jim Cannon (Betsy), Mike Cannon (Kay), Tom Cannon (Donna), Bill Cannon (Darlene); numerous nieces and nephews and countless beloved friends and colleagues♦her extended family. Pat is preceded in death by her father, William Cannon. Memorials Contributions; Please consider donating to the American Cancer Society-
