“ I loved your unique home in that small town I never heard of. I enjoyed checking out the chickens and your garden. But most of all, I enjoyed the time I spent with you that afternoon. I hope you were able to get that big family picture done. You were a light. I'll miss you.

“ Her and I was diagnosed with life changing illnesses a few months apart from each other. I was diagnosed with multiple sclerosis and she was diagnosed with breast cancer. My momma "being her sister from the heart and soul" and I got to take her to her 1st chemotherapy. She told me before we had to go that "we are in this together and we're going to fight like girls." and we did just that. She taught me with the wisdom in those beautiful words, that everyone is always equal. Yes, we may have different situations but we all share the same emotions and pain, physically, mentally, and emotionally. She was and always will be one of the best parts of my childhood. My oldest brother Steven would call her aunt Backy, and so did I. I never got that chance to meet my brother before he passed but he lives through me, and everyone each day. The night before she passed, my brother visited me in my dream and said "I'm going to get our baby girl today". I've been praying for all of the scary moments in the 5 years that he'd be the one to be right by her side. My aunt Becky wasn't just beautiful on the outside but the inside as well. She helped my mom get through losing my brother, and I think God she was. She and my mom was soul sisters, just like Amanda is mine. It's like we're our mummies mini me's. Growing up without a dad for the longest time, aunt Becky took that place because my mom was Amanda's and aunt Becky's was mine. God got one beautiful angel and my brother got his girl. I will always and forever love my aunt Becky "Backy".
