“ Taylor was a larger than life legend to me as a young kid. I'd be following around the teenagers at family gatherings and Taylor would always acknowledge me and shared his smile so freely. Even as a kid I recognized he was someone who carried a steadfast strength and fun loving spirit. I thought it was so cool he would take the time to talk with me and make me feel welcomed despite our age difference. That willingness to connect will stay with me always.

I wish I had more concrete memories to share here. It had been far too long since the last time I got to see Taylor in person and that weighs on me immensely. I mourn that I we didn't get to forge a friendship as adults and share our love for fishing and cats. I share this in the hope that anyone else feeling similarly in their grief knows they are not alone. In Taylor's example I hope to follow.

“ One of the best memories of Taylor I have was about 13 years ago. My ex-husband was cutting a large branch from a dead tree and had my son, Alan Steady on a rope to keep the branch away from hitting the house. The weight on the rope was too heavy for 1 person and Taylor was walking outside their house; directly across the street, and ran across to help Alan with the rope. He thought on instinct to help out a friend and neighbor.
Thank you again Taylor

“ When Alan was still living at the River house, T came over to fish, let me borrow a pole, and helped me bait and cast. I caught my first fish that day all while he and I were engaging in some philosophical discussion that I can't recall. He was always open and willing to help his friends and to debate big ideas. Rest in power T, you are missed.
