“ Thelma was a rock. I'll never forget what she went through to take care of her mama, Myrtle which is how I met her. She was probably just shattered at the time, she was still working, but she shouldered the responsibility and carried on. She was so sweet to me at the time as her mother's next door neighbor even though she didn't know us and we'd bought the shoddiest house in the neighborhood. She saw me as who I am and even asked for my help, which was an honor. Somewhere in the time Myrtle was having to go to full time care, Thelma had to deal with her husband Bill having a medical crisis as well, but handle it she did. With grace and patience and perseverance. She didn't remember me the last time I saw her, but I will never forget her. She was a wonderful human being and I'm sure she's now an excellent Angel.
